My dear Saiyidain,

I have now read with great interest and pleasure your two studies of Tagore and Maulana Azad. About the Azad article I have nothing to say, for you have compressed in a short space practically everything that need or could be said.

Your writing on Tagore is also excellent. The only comment I would make is that his active interest in education goes back to 1893 and not 1921. I think I gave you a copy of my book on Tagore which Luzacs published on behalf of the London University. You may also have seen TOWARDS UNIVERSAL MAN in which Tagore's own writing on education has been included. I am very tired M.S.C.

With kindest regards,

Yours sincerely,

(Humayun Kabir)
