Dear Dr Saiyadain-

You do not know me but I feel as if I know you because I have heard your lecture and have read your articles and your book on Iqbal's philosophy for education. Moreover I have read in Mrs Wilfred Smith's book on Modern Islam a presentation of your ideas.

My purpose in writing is to ask if you know of any place in India where Miss Davis knows a young American woman might make her contribution to India's educational system and in turn learn about India and her culture and thus become a builder of the bridge of friendship between ~~the~~ United States of India (Europe) and of America. The enclosed letters tell of her professional qualifications. I know her as a friend and consider her a very fine sort and one who would know how to fit into a variety of educational situations in India. My husband has been head of the Physics Department, Forman College, Lahore and I am connected with one girls high school in the city. Because of his health we have been in the U.S.A. four years but we hope to return to India this Fall. I hope then we shall meet you and really get to know you - Maybe next summer we shall go to Singapore for a while!

Yours sincerely

(Mrs. M.) Miriam Benade
