

Under the light of the Christmas star illuminating the fresh snows of winter, the man-drawn borders that criss-cross the globe fade away. The planet Earth is revealed as one complete whole, the home of man. Somehow the world's cares and crises, the nations' problems and worries, and even the troubles of the individual seem less fearsome on this one day of the year.

1970 brought the opportunity to meet and work with you at Asilomar. In thinking of you at this season, I sincerely hope that Christmas will bring you joyful hours, happy memories and a contented heart. May each path you take in the New Year be lighted with peace and happiness.
